FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The 50th portion of the still undigested order of business to which the legislative day of last Tuesday is to be divided was disposed at 10 o'clock this morning, and it was till twenty minutes past that Senators were numerous enough to constitute a quorum. Republicans were more prompt than Democrats. Mr. Dolph, of Oregon, who was the last member present, was the last member to answer. As soon as he had answered Vice President Stevenson laid before the Senate the silver purchase repeal bill.

Mr. Stewart (Rep.) of Nevada gave notice of an amendment which he intended to offer proposing a conference to be held at Washington within three months between delegates of the United States, Mexico, Central and South America, Hayti and San Domingo, for the adoption of a common silver coin to be a legal tender in all commercial transactions between the citizens of the countries represented in the conference.

The House joint resolution for the printing of 200 copies of the report before the Committee of Ways and Means was agreed to, with an amendment making the number 100 copies for the House and 200 for the Senate.

Mr. Jones (Rep.) of Nevada, took the floor and continued his speech against the bill, taking it up at the point where he left off Saturday. He said he had been trying to demonstrate that the standard money of a country could not be gold, could not be silver and could not be any material thing, that the standard of any country must be money, that the value of gold and silver depended upon the number of units of it that there never could be any fixed ratio between them and that any material could not be the standard in any country, and that any material was an unknown quantity. He went on to elaborate that proposition in contradiction of what he called the "fad" of leading Senators and leading to suppose that what was wanted was not quantity of money but quality.

After elaborating this subject Mr. Jones took up the question whether the United States should follow the example of Great Britain because some people asserted that if the United States did not follow the example of Great Britain it would have to by itself down the side of Asia, of the Fiji Islands and of Mexico. He spoke of the relations of Great Britain and India through the instrumentality of the standard they had reduced their artisans to a helpless and pitiable condition and had to seek a profitable investment for their capital in the United States. If all the creditor classes of England could have their way now, Mr. Jones said in the ruining and stripping the national property of this republic, the sufferings and miseries of its founders would have been in vain. There was no good for Great Britain to repeat this great country when she could secure all the tribute she wished by a voluntary act of Congress by the repeal of the Sherman law, an act by the consequent complete demonetization of silver. What more could Great Britain have to wish to have that the right to tax the labor of this country. The governing classes of Great Britain got $100,000,000 a year in interest and other revenues from India and more than twice as much from the United States. If the pending measure became a law the United States could displace India as the principal dependency of Great Britain. Mr. Jones referred to the order of the British government last summer closing the mints of India to silver, and to the announcement, by the New York papers that that was the "coup de grace of silver." Where, he asked, was the United States then? The position of the chief magistrate on that question was well illustrated by the line from Emerson:

"Let the dead bury their dead."

But in the words of the supplemental line the genius of the republic admonished the President as well as Great Britain:

"Thou art not alone in the world."

The people of the United States did not propose to be left out of the consideration as to what material their money should contain. It was not yet a dependency of Great Britain nor was the President a governor-general. The virile and masculine people of this country propose to regulate their own affairs without orders in council or orders from Downing street.

The section of the speech that was delivered by Mr. Jones (Nev.) day attracted very little attention in the Senate chamber, in contradiction to that which had been given to the first three sections. This was partly owing to the fact that he continued himself closely to his type-written sheets and was not interrupted by questions, and partly to the fact that Senators were thinking more of the pending compromise and of the effect upon it of the President's opposition, than they were thinking of any of the arguments for or against the pending bill. After he had been speaking two hours and a half, Mr. Jones pleaded that he was tired and said that he would like to continue his speech at some other time. No objection was made and after a call of the Senate, to which forty-seven Senators responded, Mr. Teller (Rep.) of Colorado took the floor and proceeded with an argument against the bill which he had begun some time ago, and without finishing his speech, yielded the floor to Mr. Stewart (Pop.) of Nevada saying that his throat was not in good condition and that he felt unable to proceed.

Mr. Stewart took the floor at 3:15 and addressed the Senate in favor of his proposed amendment for a Pan-American monetary conference.

In the course of Mr. Stewart's speech a question was asked him, or a suggestion made to him by Mr. Dolph (Rep.) of Oregon. "That gives me a fresh idea," said Mr. Stewart, "and now I will tell you all about it."

"Oh, don't," said Mr. Dolph, imploringly, "I will withdraw it." (Laughter.)

"Oh no, I object to you withdrawing it," said Mr. Stewart. "I want to talk upon that point."

And he diverged from the line of his remarks and went on to reply to Mr. Dolph, who soon abandoned his seat and withdrew to a cloakroom.

Mr. Stewart yielded the floor without finishing his remarks.

Senate bill to authorize the Chattanooga Western Railroad company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee river near Chattanooga, was reported from the Committee on Commerce and placed on the calendar.

The Senate, at 5 p. m., took a recess until 10:30 a. m. to-morrow.

HOUSE.

In the morning hour the House resolution providing for the disposal of certain funds belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints, at Salt Lake City, was reported with a Senate amendment directing the manner in which it should be distributed for charitable purposes. This amendment is intended to carry into effect the purposes for which the funds were originally donated. The amendment involved $237,000. The amendment was concurred in and the bill goes to the President.

Mr. Peters (Pop.) of Colorado was appointed a member of the committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Wright (Rep.) of Pennsylvania. A resolution was adopted for its immediate consideration directing that when written charges are preferred against a postmaster or an application for a pension, the Commissioner of Pensions shall furnish a copy of such charge to the person interested. It also provides that charges so received shall receive consideration, unless waived. Referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The bill appropriating $175,000 for the construction of a reservoir for the Great Basin was passed. The uniform bill to protect full value to labor and to prevent peonage was taken up and discussed until 1:30 p. m. when the House took a recess.

CHINA AND SILVER.

The Financial Situation as it Affects the Flowery Kingdom.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The Treasury Department has received a report made by Acting Consul-General Jamieson to Lord of Rosebery on the effect of the fall of silver on prices of commodities in China. The report was made on Aug. 7 from Shanghai and the object was stated by Mr. Jamieson to be to show the position which China occupies in regard to the silver question.

Discussing the question of prices of silver in China, Mr. Jamieson says: "In other words the price of silver has not been affected in proportion to any other commodity. Silver has even been brought more into prominence in the East and at present forms a larger part of the exports from Shanghai and Canton than it formerly did."

He concludes his report by stating that "the tendency of the prices of commodities in China is a slight tendency to a general advance. The fall in the price of silver has thus had no effect."

MEXICAN BANDITS.

Some Bloody History of the Late Frontier Troubles.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—In his annual report which the War Department made public to-day, Major General Frank Wheaton, commanding the troops in the Department of Texas, states that his "Indian campaign against the Kickapoos, Black Lipans and Mexicans, which had resulted in the conversion of twenty one Mexican residents of the United States, at the May term of court at San Antonio. Nearly all of these were charged with cattle stealing. The indictments had not been tried when the report was made. Gen. Wheaton says:

"About the middle of last December I received a letter from General Wheaton and he gave some interesting details that are not generally known.

"About the middle of last December, in the present year, I received the report which reflected the vigorous and determined character of the efforts being made by the troops and marshals, made overtures through a third party looking to surrender of their followers by betraying them into the hands of the troops and arranged with Joseph and Washington Shelby, who were employed by General Wheaton, my approval to bring as many of their men together as possible at a point agreed upon, with the avowed purpose of Captain crossing the river and making a raid.

"The experiment failed, owing to the quarrel among themselves. It is said that their leader, Francisco Benavides, had several men put to death for not obeying his orders. The leaders did not keep their agreement.

Benavides and another leader, Prudencio Gonzales, were captured Jan. 21 and the next day Lieutenant Dickman captured Cecilion Echevarria after a sharp fight. This man was considered a most desperate bandit. Maximo Martinez, another bandit leader, surrendered to Sheriff Haynes. Lieutenant P. G. Lowe, Eighteenth infantry, with Sheriff Shely, had a sharp fight with a band of outlaws and succeeded in killing Eusebio Martinez, alias "Mangas De Agua, the most desperado of all the bandits.

General Wheaton gives a short sketch of Benavides. He is ignorant and does not speak English. His bravery and cunning was shown in a raid he made on San Ygnacio, Tex., Concerning this massacre, General Wheaton says:

"I regret that under our laws more severe punishment cannot be given the leaders of such an unlawful raid and brutal massacre."

Important Railway Decision.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The cases of the United States against the Denver and Rio Grande Railway company involving the right of that company to take timber from public lands for the purpose of constructing its railroad line and accompanying structures, were decided in the Supreme Court of the United States, the judgment of the United States Circuit Court of the District of Columbia being affirmed. The opinion was rendered by Justice Jackson, and was an exhaustive exposition of the relations of the railroads to the government under the acts of 1872 (a special grant of right of way to the Denver and Rio Grande extended by the act of 1875) and of 1875, a general act governing the use of timber on public lands for railroad purposes.

In brief, Justice Jackson's conclusions were that the two acts were not inconsistent; that the railroad company has the right to take timber from the public lands adjacent to any portion of its line for use on any other part of its line; that the timber so taken may be used for construction of buildings, bridges, water tanks and other structures necessary for the operation and maintenance of the road as a whole, this being the evident intention of Congress in the matter. Any other construction of the law, Justice Jackson said, would defeat the object for which the law was passed.

The judgment of the court below was delivered by Justice Brewer, then judge of the Eighth circuit.

A Postmaster Arrested.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 23.—William M. Mast, who has been postmaster of this city for the past four years was arrested this morning by United States Marshal Rankin, charged with stealing a registered letter containing $30. His friends in this city refuse to believe that that he could have stolen the package. He is one of the pioneers of this city. Of late there has been considerable trouble about mail matter being stolen between Ogden and Omaha.

All Silver Declined.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The offers of silver to day to the Treasury Department aggregated 258,000 ounces at prices ranging from 80.125 to 80.75 cents an ounce. The whole amount was declined as the amounts asked and a counter offer made of 80.79 an ounce.

PARADISE REGAINED.

A Colorado Springs Letter From the Columbian Exposition.

ASPECTS OF THE GREAT SHOW.

Colonel Ensign Writes Enthusiastically of Children's Lunch, Captain De Courcey and the World's Forestry Congress at Chicago.

Special Correspondence of THE GAZETTE.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Like a Niagara the grandeur of the great Fair shows upon you the longer it is studied and observed. It is even more grand and beautiful than in May, when the writer first visited it. At that time certain portions of the grounds particularly the south parts were unfinished, and many of the exhibits were incomplete. Now, all is apparently perfect. Of the multitudes who come here, none leave without regret. Some have said that the structures begin to look shabby, but I cannot or will not admit it. To me the noble buildings of this "dream city" are more entrancing than ever. The clear waters at their base still reflect beauties more marvelous than the world has lifted to view. Among other notable objects, the Columbus vessels and Viking ship are attractions which have been lately added.

CHILDREN'S WORK AT THE FAIR.

This is children's week at the Fair. They are numerously represented, and form an interesting and exceedingly lively portion of the vast throngs. At the Children's building the little folks merrily romp away. The wide central space, used as a gymnasium, is filled with young misses and lads climbing ladders, swinging, vaulting over wooden horses, and disporting themselves like the young animals they are, all under careful oversight. At one side is a large room called the "Play Nursery." Looking through the glass partition, one sees a pleasant-faced woman and her maids in charge of the young spirits of humanity which have been consigned to their care. To the backs of each child is affixed the label of its parent for identification. The scene resembles a kindergarten, except that along the sides of the room are ranged a great number of pretty, white cribs, in a number of which are infants taking their nocturnal, ever so comfortable sleep. Suspended from the ceiling are basket-like receptacles within which other babies are severally being swung and soothed to rest and refreshing slumber. Strangely, that reminds me of the "incubators" now in active operation at one of the agricultural annexes. Crackers of all sorts, and condiments are turned out by the score through the motherly agency of a gentle-heated machine, the mystery of which I did not explore. By some curious freak a young turkey or ostrich had been produced and was stalking gloomily amid his lesser contemporaries.

LUNCH TIME AT THE FAIR.

The grounds here at the noon day lunch, and immediately after, present a novel appearance. Regardless of the signal "Keep off the grass," thousands poise on the lawns, strewing papers, lunch boxes and remnants in all directions. But in a trice, men with rakes, shovels and carts clear up the debris and make all tidy and attractive again.

It is useless to try to mention a tithe of the magnificent exhibits which here greet the eye. In a glance through the Mining building I was specially impressed with the beauty of the classic facade of the California pavilion. It is composed of native building stone, marble and onyx. This in marked contrast to the Colorado section. The latter exhibit, while good in itself, is not gracefully arranged. Although it has received a number of awards for certain of its groups, there is utter lack of an artistic or well planned design in the arrangement.

In common with others, I think the agricultural and horticultural exhibits of our State are creditable. And the State building, though decried by some, is, in my opinion, worthy of honorable mention. Of four distinct designs submitted to Mr. Burnham, the Chief of Construction, this alone received hearty and entire approval. H. P. L. Wendell of Denver is the architect.

CAPTAIN DE COURCEY'S WORK.

Captain DeCourcey, whose card now reads, "Special Agent of the Chambers of Commerce of the Cities of the Pike's Peak Region of El Paso County, Colorado," seems to be doing his duty most earnestly and effectively. He merits the cordial support of our people. Why he has not been duly sustained by the other cities and towns—parties to the contract—is more than I can understand.

As I write a thousand newsboys more or less—and a boy's military band are in line along the lake front awaiting marching orders for the Fair grounds. Each of the youngsters proudly wears a badge admitting him to the Fair and permitting a ride (or ascension) upon the Ferris Wheel. This is through the beneficence of the society known as the "Waif's Mission."

THE WOMEN'S FORESTRY CONGRESS.

The recent and somewhat notable forestry meeting at the Art Institute, Chicago, has not received attention commensurate with its importance. The published reports of its proceedings have been quite meager. It was one of the long series of congresses which have been held during the Fair, and therefore has excited but little comment. The assembly, though not large in point of numbers, was thoroughly representative. Delegates were present from nearly every section of the United States, from Canada, South America, France, Prussia, Austria and other countries. Representatives were sent from the United States Departments of the Interior and Agriculture. Hon. B. E. Fernow, chief of the Forestry division, presided over the several sessions, and was, as usual at these gatherings, the guiding spirit. A carefully prepared and interesting address was delivered by General John W. Noble, late Secretary of the Interior. He earnestly favored the conservation of native forests, particularly those of the public domain. He pronounced the question one of great and ever increasing interest in this country. It will be remembered that General Noble, while at the head of the Interior Department, was instrumental in establishing most of the great forest reserves which have been formed in the western mountain region.

The editors of The Northwestern Lumberman and The Timberman, leading American journals of that class, were present, representing the lumber interest. Their addresses received marked attention.

The delegates from our own State were Hon. William N. Byers and Colonel Edgar T. Ensign. Mr. George H. Parsons also contributed a paper.

At the close the meeting was addressed by Hon. Edward A. Bowers, assistant commissioner of the general land office. He spoke of the existing laws relating to the forests of the public domain, and the forestry bill now pending in Congress and was hopeful of the early passage of a measure which would secure the due protection of the forest reservations, and provide for the necessary use of forest products, etc.

Nearly all phases of the forestry problem were considered and appropriate resolutions adopted.

The papers of this congress, if published, will form a valuable contribution to forestry literature.

EDGAR T. ENSIGN.

A STRIKE AT NEW CASTLE.

Colorado Coal-Miners Who Want an Increase of Pay.

NEW CASTLE, Colo., Oct. 23.—The miners of work in the Vulcan district to the number of some 125, met yesterday and voted to go on a strike and the mines is closed to-day. A week ago a committee was appointed to interview the Sante Fe company in regard to its coal pay for work on the "W" vein and the concerning September pay, and a conclusion having been reached, the men are out.

The increase asked for is from $3.50 to $3.75 per yard in rooms 21 feet wide and 7 feet high, and the men state that work will not be resumed until the matter is adjusted.

Late Oriental News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—The steamer Gaelic arrived here to-day bringing China advices up to Sept. 22, and Japan to Oct. 6. She did not stop at Honolulu as expected. China advices do not bring confirmation of typhoon and loss of one hundred lives reported on the 1st. The China man says:

Reported from Pekin that it is the Empress Dowager who has guided the minister and dictated the policy of China during the Franco Siamese embroglio. She is stated to have said: "In what Siam thought were her days of power and wealth she pretended to desert China by casting her off and entering in the protection of a foreign power in case we should resent it. She has chosen her part, let her abide by it. We have everything to lose and nothing to gain by interfering and at most it would be a thankless task. Your first duty is to look after the security, wealth and happiness of your own empire."

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—It was a field day for the bulls at the Stock Exchange. Business was heavier than for a long time past, footing up 577,325 shares, and the excitement at times ran high. The radical change in tempo of speculation was due entirely to the development in the anthracite coalers. The announcement that J. W. Davis & Co. Stock Exchange members, had transferred from charge of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western in the name of Wm. K. Vanderbilt, was a general surprise to the street. It is said that the Vanderbilt Jersey Central interest in conjunction with Frank Work of Frank Work, Strong & Co., can indicate the policy of the Lackawanna. An understanding has been reached whereby the Lackawanna will be operated as a new trunk line with the Lake Shore and Nickel Plate as its western connections. The Grand Trunk will not enjoy exclusive privileges over the Lackawanna hereafter and rates are likely to be less stable.

In the general list a feeling of disappointment prevailed at the opening on account of the dilatoriness of the Senate in passing an unconditional silver repeal law. At the opening there was a reaction of ½ to 1½ per cent, but the buoyancy of the calendar soon put an end to what hopes the bears may have entertained of precipitating a general decline. The Vanderbilts were the first to feel the influence of the rise in Lackawanna and kindred stocks, and the grangers were a good second with Lake Shore bounding up to 129, Nickel Plate 2½ to 16½, New York Central 2½ to 101, North Western 1½ to 103½, St. Paul 1⅞ to 61½ and Burlington and Quincy 2⅛ to 82½. Among the Industrials American Sugar led all others in point of activity and advanced from 90½ to 97⅞ on dealings of 77,700 shares. Chicago Gas and Cotton were also firm, but Distilling and Cattle Feeding shows evidence of recent selling for the long account, under the cover of favorable reports about Congressional action, etc. In the closing dealings the market was strong. The net gains for the day ranged from ½ to 3 per cent, the anthracite coal stocks leading. Railway and miscellaneous bonds were buoyant.

A Famous Hotel Burned.

EASTON, N. H., Oct. 23.—Fire was discovered this afternoon in the famous old Bear's Head hotel, on Deer's Head Bluff, on Hampton beach, and in three hours it was in ruins, together with the cottage connected. The wind was blowing so fiercely that it threatened Leavitt's and the Hampton Beach hotels, and only by a change of wind were these buildings saved. There is no water service at the Beach and no fire apparatus at the Beach or village, three miles distant. The bowling alleys and stables were saved by the use of wet blankets and carpets. About one-half of the furniture was saved.

The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective chimney in the laundry and had probably been smoldering in the partitions for several days. Colonel F. H. Dumas, the proprietor and a few servants were in the house but intended closing it to-day. The loss to Colonel Dumas will reach $30,000. The hotel was insured for $10,000 and the cottage for $500.

A Yale Professor Resigns.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 23.—Professor E. B. Clapp of the Greek department at Yale has resigned to take charge of the Greek department at the University of California. He will, however, remain at Yale till the end of the present term. Professor Clapp has been assistant professor at Yale for three years—coming here in 1890 from the Illinois State College. He was one of the most popular of the younger professors at Yale, where he has had a successful career during his experience as instructor here.

The South American War.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A special Buenos Ayres cable to The World says: The rebel cruiser Republica, appeared off Montevideo and signalled to the Brazilian warship Tiradentes. In the evening the Tiradentes sailed with another vessel to attack Admiral Mello's fleet in Rio Janeiro harbor. The rebels have proclaimed a provisional government for the State of Santa Catharina.

LOCAL EVENTS.

A Fire at The Cucharras House at 2:0'clock this Morning.

ANOTHER POPULIST TICKET.

A Second Populist Ticket Filed With the County Clerk by Dissatisfied Voters.—It's an Entirely New Ticket. Some other Points for the Voters.

At 2 o'clock this morning the Cucharras house, a small hotel on Cucharras street just in the rear of the Spaulding house, was discovered to be on fire. It was quickly extinguished and the loss is small. The hotel is a two story and a half frame with a small wooden kitchen in the rear. It is the property of Mr. Henry Hall and is leased by John Warner who runs the hotel. In the building last night about fourteen people were sleeping and they were awakened by a dense cloud of smoke filling the rooms. Everyone was able to get out of the building although many had a close call.

The fire companies responded quickly and the France and Crowell teams had a tight race for first place in getting water on. The chief decided that the France was first.

The blaze originated in the kitchen, but what caused it could not be discovered. It was said that gasoline had been used early in the evening to clean clothes and this might have caused it.

The loss is not heavy either on the building or the furniture. Mr. Warner has $800 insurance on his furniture in companies represented by M. Kennedy, but it could not be learned this morning how much Mr. Hall is carrying.

SECOND POPULIST TICKET.

The Dissatisfied Voters Will Have a Six-Political Notes.

Politics is about all that one heard on the streets yesterday. In fact it was a warm day for politics and the warm people were the Yarnell Populists. Saturday was the last day for filing nominations and late or hatter names cannot be placed on nomination with the County Clerk to be printed on the official ballot. At the eleventh hour a number of the Populists who have no use for the "Sooner" ticket nominated at the late Populist convention filed a completely new Populist ticket. It has the necessary 100 signatures duly certified to before a notary public and most of the names are from Cripple Creek, Barry and Altman, the Populist strongholds, it is believed.

The ticket is called "The People's Party Ticket" and will have the arm and hammer as its emblem. It is made up as follows: County clerk, Ernest C. Dussell of Cripple Creek; county treasurer, Harry O. D. McCauley of Roswell; county assessor, Charles Miller of Fountain; superintendent of schools, T. B. Pyles of Florissant; county commissioner, Thomas Gwillim of Falcon; surveyor, Charles Milton of Lawrence; coroner, J. R. Wilcox of Colorado Springs.

It will be seen that the names of none of the Yarnell ticket are placed on this and that was what made the fathers of that movement angry. They claimed that when the petition was circulated the names of H. G. Berry and Pete Eales were on it but that they were taken off afterwards.

There will be five tickets printed on the ballot this year. The Republicans will have one ticket and the Democrats one ticket, but there will be three Populists' tickets. Two of these will be headed by Berry's name and one by Dussell. The Yarnell or Convention Populists in filling their list of candidates to the County Clerk forgot to put in the emblem; so they filed by petition a second ticket with the cottage emblem of last year which will be called "The Independent Populist Ticket." This bears the names of the candidates nominated at the Yarnell convention. The Populist ticket named by petition makes the fifth.

The thing that adds to the distress of the Yarnell crowd is that the ticket named by the petition is in many respects strong, much stronger than the one they put up. Robert Green, the candidate for sheriff, is an officer of the miners' union at Cripple Creek, and superintendent of the Buena Vista.

There came near being a "scrap" in front of the, courthouse yesterday over the elections. Bob Green, the new Populist candidate for sheriff, offered to make Pete Eales, the "sooner" candidate, his deputy if he would withdraw—provided he was elected—and Eales immediately wanted to scrap.

Judge J. M. Abbott has resigned as chairman of the Central committee of the Sooner Populists and Reuben Berry is now performing the duties.

The Sooner Populists have no newspaper support in the county worth mentioning. The Clipper comes out every evening in its support but the candidates had better hire it to advocate the other ticket. It is a fact that a Republican of this city loaned the publishers of the paper money to get out last Friday and Saturday's issue.

The Democrats are saying nothing but are quietly shearing wool. They have a ticket that they claim is very strong and certainly one that they need not be ashamed to support. They were claiming yesterday that the filing of the new ticket will help them, as many of their voters who were inclined to stray over to the Pop fold will now stand true to the Democratic candidates who have boldly gone in for principle.

Central African Meeting.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Missionary Millar has sent by letter from Uganda the details of mutiny of Mohammedans, incited by Selim Bey and Emin Pasha's old Nubian followers who had been taken into the British service. The object of the mutineers was to regain control of Uganda. To repress them Captain MacDonald, the British commander, was obliged to arm both Protestants and Catholics. The men of both creeds made common cause against the Mohammedans, and inflicted a heavy defeat upon them. Hundreds of mutineers were killed and the others were driven back to their reservation. A number were dismissed under the gun muzzles. Selim Bey was made prisoner, but died on his way to the coast. The mutiny broke out in June after Sir Gerald Portal, Great Britain's special commissioner to Uganda had left.

Another Trial for Starr.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Oct. 23.—Henry Starr was on trial in Judge Parker's court to-day on a charge of burglary, having robbed a country store in the Indian Nation last spring. The jury returned a verdict of guilty from the box.

Starr and Kid Wilson, his partner, are now being tried for the Prior Creek train robbery. There are fifteen counts against them in this indictment alone. Even if Starr should never hang for murder, the remainder of his days will be probably spent in jail.

A WOMANLY PROTEST.

In another place on this page we reprint part of the letter written to the Denver Republican by Mrs. Joel F. Vaile, and we call to it the especial attention of every man who reads THE GAZETTE to-day.

For the most part, the women who do not want to vote keep still about it, and it is therefore inferred by many that since the suffragists make all the noise, all the women are suffragists. We believe that the great majority of women do not want to undertake the duties of citizenship, and we are glad that Mrs. Vaile has entered this womanly protest.

The words quoted from Mrs. Dahlgren go right to the heart of the subject. The real unit of society, except in such places as the Shaker Communities or the Oneida Community—is the family, not the individual. Anything that tends to disintegrate the family or impair its solidarity or efficiency is a danger to our Christian civilization.

But there are other reasons for men to consider.

Is it fair or just that women should have all the privileges of voters without the corresponding duties and responsibilities? The question answers itself. But are we ready to impose upon our wives and sisters and daughters and mothers the duty of serving on jury or mending roads. Shall we render them liable to a call from the Sheriff when he needs a posse comitatus?

The idea seems ridiculous, but we submit that these duties are involved in the suffrage, and that it is not fair for any class of the community to have the power of voting for a certain policy unless they are prepared to help carry that policy out, practically and if need be by physical force. It is true that some men who vote are not able to fulfil all civic duties, but these are the exceptions. Among women, those who are able to fulfil all these functions are exceptional, and those who wish to fulfil them are rarer still.

These are some of the things that must be taken into consideration in voting on this question. For our part, it seems to us unfair and unmanly for men by their votes to thrust upon women a number of duties which the majority of them do not wish to assume. This is not a question of comparative intelligence or comparative virtue. We yield to no one in our respect for womanly virtue and our estimate for feminine intelligence. And it is just because we have the very highest regard for women as women, and put the very highest estimate upon their function in our complex civilization, that we protest against burdening them with duties which men can discharge.

THE COMPROMISE.

For some time past it has been evident that the Senate must either compromise or quit. There is no probability that the Democratic majority will take the responsibility of changing the rules, and under the present rules and their present administration unconditional repeal is out of the question. But out of the question not only because a determined minority are resolved to go all lengths in opposing it but also because there is not a majority really and at heart in favor of it. It has become evident, during the past month that among the Senators who would vote for unconditional repeal if that proposition came directly before them, there might or might not be a quorum, who prefer that the question should not come to a vote in its present form.

The terms of the proposed compromise have already been given in our news columns. Briefly recapitulated they are:

1. The continuance of the silver purchases according to the present law until Oct. 1, 1894.

2. The coinage of all silver now available in the Treasury.

3. The retirement of paper currency of denominations under $10 and the substitution therefor of silver coin and silver certificates.

There are some good features about this proposal, notably the retirement of small bills. That provision would be stronger, however, if it did not authorize certificates. The half dollars are better and cleaner, and our Eastern friends would soon get used to having their trousers pockets lined with leather to sustain the additional weight.

The coinage of the silver now in the treasury is a good move, too, but the repeal of the purchase clause on Oct. 1, 1894, is not so good. If it is to be repealed perhaps it might better be done as soon as possible rather than to continue the present state of uncertainty and agitation for a year longer. It is to be said, however, that agitation is bound to continue in any event until silver is restored to its proper place in our system, not as a commodity, but as a genuine money metal. The question will never be fully settled until it is settled right, and there will be educational campaigns East and West until a rational, satisfactory solution of the vexed problem is reached.

Some of the States have laws against the use of open stoves in railroad cars. In others progressive railroads have adopted safe systems of heating without the pressure of legislation. Such an accident as the recent one in Michigan shows very clearly the difference between the old, flimsy built, stove heated cars, and the more modern ones with patent brakes, couplings and coupling chains, heated by steam and lit by gas or electricity, such as are turned out by the Pullman company, and such as are used by most of our western roads for second class as well as for first class traffic. When two trains meet in a head-end collision and in one twenty-eight people are killed and half a hundred injured, and in the other not one is seriously hurt, the public cannot help drawing some very forcible conclusions in regard to railroad equipment and operation.

A quotation from The Alamosa Independent-Journal, marked to be reprinted on our editorial page Sunday, was set up by mistake as an original editorial. It mentioned the uncertainty of majority rule in a legislative body, and pointed out the necessity of considering that question aside from its direct and immediate bearing on the repeal contest. It was a good editorial, but, as we make it a rule never to copy without credit, we owe this apology to The Independent-Journal and to our readers for the mistake.

At the meeting of the Republican club this evening the question of equal suffrage will be discussed. Involving as it does a fundamental and perhaps a permanent change in our political system, this question is in some respects the most important one which will come before the voters for their consideration at this election. In such a matter every one should be prepared to vote intelligently and neither be guided by prejudice, nor omit to vote altogether. There ought to be a large attendance at the meeting, and we expect there will be.

The session of the Western Slope Congress which was to have been held at Glenwood Springs in November, has been postponed until next May. In a statement issued by the executive committee, the reasons given are the prevailing hard times, and the amount of money spent by Colorado people at the World's Fair. The reasons given seem to be good ones, but we have no doubt the Congress will be a success whenever held.

All persons who have changed their residence since the last election should be careful to see that their registration is correct. It is now too late for original registrations, but changes can be made until Friday.

The Womanly Side

Is it not about time to admit that there is both intelligence and patriotism on the side of that vast number of women who do not want the ballot? If we could believe, as the advocates of suffrage do, that our power for good in this world would be vastly multiplied by holding in our hands the ballot, we should long for it. But we do not so believe. We hold that women already have the highest possible influence and opportunity for good, if rightly used, and that the ballot, with its train of duties, excitements and temptations would be, for us a more than doubtful gain.

We are sometimes reproached for the silence which our side maintains on this subject. But the burden of proof does not rest with us, and our reasons for dissent from this innovation upon established custom rest upon convictions and feelings too deep to be easily put in words.

Yet the non-suffragist does now and then speak publicly, and in no uncertain tone. Ten years ago, when the matter was being pressed with vehemence upon the Massachusetts legislature, 323 intelligent women of Boston submitted their protest against having the ballot forced upon them. And a few years earlier, Madeline Vinton Dahlgren, the widow of Admiral Dahlgren, a woman who is known not only as a gifted writer, but as a lady of the highest character and culture, presented to Congress a protest against woman's suffrage. Called forth by the voluminous petitions of the other side and offered as she says "on behalf of the masses of silent women whose silence does not give consent. It is a model of courtesy and brevity, and I trust I shall be pardoned for closing by quoting little but the protest itself, which reads from here. She says:

"This grave question is not one of simple expediency or the reverse. Our reasons for dissent lie deeper and strike higher. They are based upon that which in all Christian nations must be recognized as the higher law, that fundamental law upon which Christian society in its very construction rests. Its logic may be thus condensed: Marriage is a sacred unity. The family through it is the foundation of the State. Each family is represented by its head, just as the State ultimately finds the same unit through a series of representations. The new doctrine may be thus defined: Marriage is a mere compact and means divorce. Each family must therefore have a separate individual representation.

"Gentlemen, you cannot displace the corner stone of the Christian State without danger to the State itself. With father, brother, husband, son taken from me by death, I stand utterly alone with minor children to educate and property interests to guard. But I should deem it unpatriotic to ask for a general law to meet that exceptional position in which by the will of God I am placed. I prefer rather to trust to that moral influence over men which intelligence never fails to exercise and which is really more potent than the direct vote.—[Charlotte M. Vaile, in Denver Republican.

Three Rebellious Democrats

A very interesting disclosure of the gossip of late to-night is one that is put out upon good authority. It is to the effect that there are three Senators on the Democratic side of the chamber who threaten to give their associates trouble in the future should an unconditional repeal bill pass.

The rebellious trio is composed of Senators Irby of South Carolina, Roach of North Dakota, and Martin of Kansas. All of them are unyielding advocates of free silver and there appears to be a pronounced tincture of Populist vagaries in their plans.

While the Democratic and Republican leaders have been holding secret conferences with a view to reaching some solution of the pending problem the three Senators named have pledged themselves to vote against any revision or change of the tariff law if the Sherman law is repealed. Their votes, if subtracted from the straight out Democratic column will deprive the Democrats of a majority in the Senate as I think about everybody knows complications.—[New York Sun.

HELD UP IN HIS CAR

A Story of the Kendallville Robbery from the Inside

Express Messenger M. M. Weber, who was blown up by the train robbers near Kendallville, Ind., had just returned from a trip over the Lake Shore road and very readily told of his thrilling experience in the famous robbery. He has lived in Buffalo about twenty-five years. He has been an express messenger on the Lake Shore road for years.

"We were rolling along at a good lively rate. My assistant, B. B. Hamlin, and myself were alone in the car. It was about 1.30 in the morning. The lights were turned low, and most of the passengers in the coaches and sleepers were asleep, just as we were approaching the switch at Kendallville. Two revolvers were suddenly applied within a foot of my head, and I was ordered to stand up. I opened the door of the car and looked ahead. I saw at once that the red switch light was turned on, which caused the engineer to stop suddenly. Before the time to look a second time or shout to the engineer, "crash" bang" sounded a pistol shot by the engine, and I knew what was the matter.

"They ordered us to stand to Hamlin and closed the door and fastened it as quickly as possible. Then I went to the local safe and took out a bag of currency and all the valuables I could get hold of, and threw them over among the boxes and packages in the freight end of the car. That was the last I knew for some time. When I recovered consciousness, I was lying on the floor of the car, and two of the robbers were inside at work.

"Immediately after stopping the train they had placed a vigorous bomb on the outside sill of the car door, and the explosion, the great concussion, is what made me unconscious. When I came to, as I said, two of them were inside and had the lamps lighted. The chimneys had been broken by the shock, and as the car was full of smoke you can imagine it was something like a nightmare to come up from unconsciousness and see these two masked robbers. I thought it was smoke light. The moment I stirred one of them the shorter one covered me with a winchester rifle. Hamlin was guarded in the same way. They had red handkerchiefs tied over their faces up to their eyes and tucked down and tied at the back.

"We were here for business, and one of them said, 'Get up to a half standing position.' It was the tall one—the leader—who spoke.

"I was in a sitting position.

"Where is the money?" he asked.

"In the large safe, most of it," I replied.

"What I have is in the local safe.

"Well, I want it," he said. I threw the door open at his command, of course.

"There is not much in there to quote at to anything but a few jewelry and valuable papers. I had left the door.

"Well, I'm sorry," he quickly replied. "I'll see if I can't fill the bag out of the safe."

I'm not exactly sure that there are two safes in my car. One is the standard safe, which is all the express world knows, and the local safe, in which we carry things of less value and small amounts of money. We have called it a jewelry safe, because the station agents seldom never open it. It is a mistake. Of the clock alone it is not opened until it gets to Buffalo, and then, between Chicago and New York or between San Francisco and Chicago.

But to get back to the robbery. He pulled out two or three packages and after breaking them open and finding no money in them, he finally put into a most furious rage. He very evidently didn't want and didn't expect a light. In some of the packages there was a railroad money, but I don't know where to look for it and so didn't let him have it. He swore with the most fearful oath that I ever heard, and said, "Where is the money?" "Up there," I said, turning to the station agent.

"Open it," he demanded.

"I can't," said I.

"I'll open it for you," he said, turning to Hamlin.

"I can't," said Hamlin, and then I explained to him that the dial was off and we didn't know of opening it.

"Well, I'll open it, and quick," he said, and he ordered some one else to the car to get him a pickax. At this point I asked him if I might pick up the freight bills that he had thrown about on the floor, and he gave me the privilege. I gathered the up and we filled all the time. By that time he had got a sledge hammer and told his partner to enter us to the rear of the car and all at once the thunderous of the freight boxes. I did not know what his intent was, but I soon knew when he blew right in the safe. We made a little tour around and then we went behind it with us. I put me covered with a winchester rifle all the time.

"Then the engineer started to work at the safe. He struck it two or three with the sledge, and then after stopping over and further clear of the lights in fuse until it was back to where we were. The concussions were deadened by the sawdust in the safe, but they were enough to shake us up. He got four certificates in the safe, and then he said he was pretty sore on the loss of the company from his failure.

"Never mind," he said, "I'll get the money next week." He was quite cool.

After the explosion the train was left standing in the main track, and the engineer and fireman were left in charge of two men while the rest of us went back to the station. We were marched in front of the engine. He said to us, "Now, you fellows, you can go back to your train."

"They refused us. I said to Hamlin and closed the door and fastened it as quickly as possible. Then I went to the local safe and took out a bag of currency and all the valuables I could get hold of, and threw them over among the boxes and packages in the freight end of the car. That was the last I knew for some time. When I recovered consciousness, I was lying on the floor of the car, and two of the robbers were inside at work.

ROBERT GRAVES.

Cats and Suicide.

Now and then one sees a paragraph describing how a cat committed suicide by getting in front of a street car and letting the wheels go over its neck. A Boston motorman does not believe in the suicide theory. He says it is stupidity and slow thinking that costs the cat her life. "Them animals," he says, "gets confused. You can see that they don't want to get hurt no more nor a man would, but when they sees cars coming both ways, and horses and wagons, and crowds on the sidewalks, and hears the noises, they don't know which way to go. They lose their senses most at night, because the lights seem to scare 'em. Since I've been running a trolley car I've run over half a dozen of 'em, and they all squatted down on the rails. But they didn't mean suicide."

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

How She Was Once Not Escorted Home From a Railroad Station.

"Speaking of bad breaks," said the lawyer, "Jack Berkley, a friend of mine, was telling me the other night of an experience of his which he looks upon as a record breaker.

"He was attending college during the time that Professor Stowe occupied a chair at Bowdoin, and one stormy night the learned gentleman, being loath to leave his comfortable quarters, asked Jack if he wouldn't go down to the station to meet Mrs. Stowe.

"Jack didn't know the lady, but he willingly accepted the honor of escorting so great a celebrity as Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe and hastened down through the snow and sleet to watch for the train.

"After a time he presented himself before the professor without the expected guest.

"'Where is she?' demanded that gentleman.

"'She didn't come, Sir,' said Jack.

"'Oh, but I know she did. She wrote me she was coming, and Mrs. Stowe never disappoints me,' was the very positive answer.

"'But, sir,' protested Jack, 'there was only one person got off the train, and that was an old Irish woman.'

"'Strange,' mused the professor. 'What can have happened to her?'

"At that moment there was a knock at the door, and Mrs. Stowe entered.

"'Aha!' exclaimed the professor, glad to see her. 'There you are! I sent this young man down to the station to escort you home, and he has returned without you. Did you see him?'

"'Why, my dear,' said Mrs. Stowe, putting on a pair of spectacles and looking at Jack, 'this is the young man I came with.'"

The Gazette has a larger circulation in Colorado Springs than all other daily newspapers combined.

Mrs. H. C. Fursman left last evening for the Fair.

"Waifs of New York" at the opera house to-night.

Mrs. W. P. Bonbright left last evening for a visit in Philadelphia.

Mr. J. H. Glass of No. 22 S. Weber street, has gone to Milwaukee to spend the winter.

Dr. B. B. Graver has removed from 630 West Huerfano street to 23 South Nevada avenue.

The ladies of Grace Church guild cordially invite all friends of the parish to the rectory this evening at 7:30.

Miss May Sanford of Taunton, Mass., has returned from the World's Fair and will spend the winter in this city.

Wm. J. Mackey, an Englishman by birth, received his naturalization papers in the County court yesterday.

Mr. J. S. Stevens and Mr. E. C. G. Robinson have returned from their hunting trip in the western part of the State.

Stated convocation of Colorado Springs chapter, No. 6, R. A. M., this evening, when there will be work on the Past Master's degree.

The fire engine which belongs to "The Waifs of New York" company will be seen on the streets to-day. The engine weighs 3200 pounds.

The funeral of Mary Fitzgerald, who was found dead in bed Saturday, will be held from St. Ann's Catholic Church at 10 o'clock this morning.

The A. O. U. W. and the Degree of Honor will have a joint entertainment at Odd Fellows hall this evening. All members of those orders invited.

Professor Parsons gave the large number of young men present at the rally Sunday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. rooms many practical thoughts that will be helpful.

Captain Bickford and Charles Morrin chose the sides in the Wheelmen's team race at Fountain Saturday. The Bickford team scored 11 points to 37 for the other side.

Regular classes in the Y. M. C. A. "Gym" to-night at 7:15. All members of the class are asked to be on hand promptly. There is room for a few more. All who wish to join are asked to be on hand to-night.

A blaze at the coal sheds of Wamlell & Son on W. Moreno avenue Sunday morning called out the fire department. The fire was extinguished with very little effort and the loss is small. It was probably caused by sparks from an engine.

The first entertainment this year at the Institute for the Mute and Blind will occur next Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Be sure to attend and encourage the pupils in their laudable efforts to enlarge their library and perfect themselves in band music.

Little Maude Lovelace, the child singer, leaves shortly for her home in Kansas City. Saturday evening Mrs. McComvell and Mrs. Hilton of 325 Bijou street, gave a party for Master Hilton in honor of Miss Maude. The little people had an enjoyable time singing and dancing.

Judge Campbell yesterday announced his decision in the motion for a new trial in the case of the People vs. W. E. McLain. He overruled the motion. Defendant's attorney gave notice of a motion to arrest judgment. The defendant was ordered committed to jail until after the disposal of this motion. The court adjourned until Saturday.

Several interesting things can be said just now about the Lennox Furniture company. One is that they are running one of the handsomest delivery wagons seen on our streets. Another is that they filled an order yesterday to be shipped to Princeton, Ills., and they have made a change in their advertisement in this issue which will interest all lovers of cozy and comfortable homes.

A suit was filed in the District court Saturday evening entitled J. J. Hagerman vs. The St. Joe and Mineral Farm Consolidated Mining company, B. Clark Wheeler, et al. An injunction was asked restraining defendants from altering the books of the company in any way, a receiver was prayed for and also that defendants make a strict accounting. Judge Campbell granted a temporary injunction. The suit grows out of a loan of money.

The first meeting of the Congregational Literary Club was held last evening in the First Church. An organization was effected by the adoption of a constitution, and the following officers were elected: President, Judge Jno. B. Severy; vice president, Mrs. S. T. Dunbar; secretary and treasurer, Mr. E. M. Hayden; executive committee, Mrs. A. H. Partridge and Miss Sarah Dorsey. The literary programme of the evening, consisting of essays, readings and musical selections, was carried out in accordance with the programme already printed. The attendance was large and the club starts out with excellent prospects for success.

The Minstrels.

W. S. Cleveland's minstrel show was the attraction at the opera house last night. In the lower part of the house the audience was conspicuous by its absence. This is somewhat remarkable as the show has usually done a large business here. Perhaps the rumors that reached the city from Denver about the exhibition had their effect. The first part of the performance was new and quite attractive. The costumes were of the fifteenth century and the stage was set to represent the court of Ferdinand and Isabella. In the background a panorama of the World's Fair was kept moving. The old time minstrel men, Lew Benedict and Chas. Golyeat, with John Queen and Byron Spaun did the negro comedy. Much of it was fresh. The singing was good without any particular feature worthy of special comment. The latter part of the performance was about the worst ever shown here by a minstrel company, and much of it was positively offensive. The Damautine troupe of French female dancers gave the first exhibition in this city of the peculiar dance that has attracted so much attention in New York. One is compelled to wonder why it attracts attention over a hundred other similar exhibitions of the kind. Cleveland is carrying a cheap show on his former reputation.

The rally of the County Union Y. P. S. C. E. last evening at the First Christian Church was largely attended and the interesting service was greatly enjoyed. Mr. W. A. Lloyd, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., led the praise and prayer service at 7:30 and at 8 o'clock Miss Bay, vice-president of the Union, took charge of the meeting. The committees on lookout, prayer meeting, social, Sunday school, missionary, calling, literature, finance and music met together for half an hour in the class rooms. After they re-assembled reports from each committee were given the audience.

MINES AND STOCKS.

Work is 2½c bid with an upward tendency.

A good sized block of the Union stock was sold yesterday at 5c.

Pharmacist is 22½c bid. There were sales of Pacific Rawlings at 9½c.

Calumet was in good demand with 21½c bid. There is not much of it offered.

Mollie Gibson sold last evening at $2.35 and a number of sales were reported yesterday.

Anaconda has marked the strongest advance and is now held at 17½c. Isabella is firm at 15c.

An adverse suit was filed in the District Court yesterday entitled The Twin Sisters Gold Mining Company vs. Wm. M. Armstrong, et al. It is the Twin Sisters lodes 1 and 2, and the Central lode adversing the Maria A. lode.

Not many sales were recorded yesterday but the tone of the market was very strong, nearly all of the common traders advancing from a fraction to a cent. All of the stocks are held strong and buyers will have to pay an advance to secure them.

Articles of incorporation of The Delaware Gold Mining company were filed yesterday, the incorporators being Robert Bailey, Carlos Wood, H. A. Willets, Wm. M. Beardsley and Chas. F. Fury. The capital stock is $100,000 and the company will mine at Cripple Creek. The offices will be in Denver.

"Waifs of New York"—Tonight.

"The Waifs of New York" will be the attraction at the Opera House this evening. An exchange says:

"Few dramas of its class have achieved so long and continued success as "The Waifs of New York" and it seems as if it were really perennial. Much new and striking scenery is introduced. Amongst the great scenes are the Harlem River bridge with its passing trains; the graphic and amusing Tombs police court; quaint old Trinity church; Castle Garden, and the great fire scene at the Five Points. Many members of the company are artists of unquestionable ability including Miss Florence Roberts, who assumes the leading role of Willie Rufus; a very brilliant child artist, little Virgie Bray, Andrew Amann, a Dutch comedian of much talent; Mrs. Edward Clifford, a capital eccentric actress and others of equal merit."

Victims Identified.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 23.—The following bodies of persons killed in the Chicago and Grand Trunk railway collision a few days ago were identified tonight: J. M. Ross of Chicago, identified by his brother, Marcus Reis of Kansas City, and his friend J. M. Sloss of No. 32 State street, Chicago, identified by clothing; O. J. Laxe of New York City, identified by clothing, by his sister, Miss Belle Laxe, and his brother, Charles S. Laxe, of East Twenty-first street, New York.

It was thought that Mr. and Mrs. Darling of Tilsonburg, Ont., had been identified, but the friends gave up the attempt. There are now eight bodies unclaimed. They will be put in a vault at Oak Hill cemetery to-morrow.

A Dakota Blizzard.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 23.—Advices from Dakota report a regular blizzard raging there. At Aberdeen, S. D., a violent storm of rain and snow has been raging since early this morning. Snow is now nearly an inch deep. The storm is from the northwest and one of the severest experienced in years for this season. The temperature is mild. At Huron the same conditions prevail. At Hillboro, N. D., a cold sleet commenced falling this morning which has changed to snow and the ground is covered. A stiff wind is blowing from the northwest. Several inches are on the ground at Grand Forks and more coming.

A 6-Day Bicycle Race.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Frank W. Sanger announced to-day that he had consummated arrangements for a six days' bicycle race, to be wheeled in the arena of the Madison Square Garden on geared ordinary bicycles during Christmas week. Foreign riders have been notified and are expected to enter. Among celebrated American riders who have already signified a desire to take part in the contest are Roe, Meixell, Ashinger, Martin, Golden, Albert and Schock.
